

Minister denies Pasargadae buffer change, expands Cyrus restoration crew

8 >

> irandaily.ir

| newspaper.irandaily.ir

| IranDailyWeb

Araghchi: Armenia's prosperity, peace in Caucasus play part in Iran's border security

Pezeshkian to depart for Armenia, Belarus on Monday

2 >

NGL plant comes on stream in Ilam Province with 240 mcf/d capacity

Oil minister: Gas flaring to end by early 2029

3 >

President Masoud Pezeshkian (2nd L) addresses a meeting in Tehran on August 16, 2025 during which he remotely opens a factory to process associated petroleum gas (APG) in western Iran.
● president.ir

Taking into account
Iran's conditions over past year

Pezeshkian gov't track record generally positive

INTERVIEW

4 >

Tehran reiterates warning about foreign interference in Caucasus region

2 >

Iran to play in five friendlies
before FIVB World Championship

6 >

Saeb Tabrizi's tomb to become cultural beacon with Farshchian's burial

7 >

Iran should not let others cash in on its disputes

Time ripe to address issues with US

By Heshmatollah Falahatpisheh
International affairs analyst

OPINION EXCLUSIVE

Several smaller regional states have been playing off the rift between Iran and the United States, trying to link their own disputes with Tehran to Washington to secure concessions. A case in point was the "Zangezur Corridor" issue between Armenia and Azerbaijan—an approach that is now being mirrored elsewhere, including in Lebanon.

Iranian Officials must once and for all put an end to this chronic challenge namely the exploitation of Iran-US tensions by others for their own gain. Iran cannot allow its issues to be used as a bargaining chip in the hands of others.

In such a context, Tehran must settle its issues with Washington and, in parallel, move within a framework of regional security. At this juncture, if Iran's actions send a message other than peace, they will not only fail to pay off but will also leave the country worse off.

Page 2 >